[Correspondence of the Philadelphia Times.] New York, July 20.—Business is not worse than it was. For the second quarter of 1876 there are 611 failures less than last year, and over 1,000 less than in the first quarter of the present year. A few days ago I met the Hon. Charles Farwell, one of the principal merchants of Chicago, and he

"Our people in the Northwest are very well off indeed. A farmer came to me the other day and said: 'Well, I have had to give away my wool.' Gave it away, did ing five cents a yard for your wife's clothing-five cents for prints. What did you pay when you got a dollar a pound for your wool! 'Fifty cents for print muslin.' Yes, you get twenty-three per cent. of the old JOBBING AND TEA TRADE.

New York city has lost a great part of its jobbing and nearly all its tea trade. No other eastern city has captured it; the West, by her political power, has drawn the importing business of the coast to itselfdrawn the tea to Chicago by rail, bonded her own importations to her own warehouses, and is manufacturing for her own consumers. New York's inalienable interests appear to be banking, fashion, beaux arts, belles-lettres, and, I think, the future manufacture of gloves, millinery, and small wares, upon the scale of Paris. There Trade. Little shops, little wares, low wages, personal attractiveness, cheerful spirits, thrift, and life out of doors, make Paris. tending toward the same minute and infinite development. The millionaires have ruined tea-table. New York as far as they could go. We owe facilities. We owed nothing to Mr. Stewtalent and the monopoly of shopkeeping. Jay Gould has disgusted mankind with New York. But here the population sticks because it loves the city, and here will work out another destiny for it.

A FINISHED CITY.

This city is finished to all intents, and its great debt will prove some day to have been wisely incurred-at least the honest part of it. We have two Broadways instead of one, Fifth avenue being opened parallel to old Broadway. New York and Brooklyn have large parks. The water front of both cities is a wide, noble street. The bridge to connect the two cities is all finished except the cables. We have an abundance of public buildings, sufficient for a centuryeivic, State, and national-and our theatres, halls, public squares, street-railroads, etc., are perfected. Our water-service is ample. We have three railroads to the West and three routes to the coal regions. Washington; I say that's Lincoln." The city has taken in the adjacent mainland, the Harlem river. Hell-Gate will be blasted out in another month, and give us two harbors and an ocean canal to Providence and Boston. FIXED GRADES.

The grades of the whole island have been fixed and the main boulevards opened at a huge cost, but they will last a thousand years. The only steam railroads which come to this island pass through a tunnel, itself a wonder. The Brooklyn bridge will finish New York, complete its autonomy, and, I think, hasten consolidation. For myself I heartily wish that the district of New York was a federal district, administered by the United States, and that our local politicians were allowed to make laws on Blackwell's Island exclusively. The great bridge is now the highest object in the landscape of New York, and, I think, the highest construction on this continent. The Brooklyn bridge, although built down at the water-level, dwarfs every spire and bulk of buildings in New York. It looks like two pair of great cathedral windows regarding each other across a torrent where once the altar and the choir had lain. Silent, vacant, hollow, yawning, longing, towering, they rise like footstools for the Almighty. When the chords shall be spun upon them and tremble to the music of a million men, hurrying there like birds upon a rainbow, then will New York be visible, as from the clouds, in all her plentitude of bays and ports, of floods and ferries, of tides and streets.

Marriage Superstitions. Since marriage became an institution there have been certain signs and superstitions that have clung to its celebration through all ages and in all countries. Even to-day in the most civilized nations we have not entirely rid our minds of these superstitions, and warrant that there is never a bride but indulges herself in looking for some happy omen. Few people are daunt-less enough to be married on Friday, and we all have the most unlimited confidence in that old shoe thrown after the newlywedded pair. Nearly every bride of to-day wears about her when she is married some trifling thing borrowed from a lady friend, and all know that "Blest is the bride on whom the sun doth shine," and are equally

"To change the name and not the letter, Is a change for the worse and not for the better." So on, quite indefinitely, it is wonderful how these ancient signs are handed down from generation to generation, and how impotent reason is to do away with their hold upon the human mind. Let us recall a few of the olden beliefs concerning marriage superstitions. In the earliest weddings we commercial traveller for J. A. Cooper & Co., read of among the Jews we find that the fourth day of the week was considered the | boots and shoes at Kansas City, was in the unlucky day for virgins to wed, and the fifth for widows. The Romans also believed that certain days were unfavorable for the performance of marriage rites, and horses were fairly flying over the fearful these were the Calends, Nones, and Ides of every month, the whole months of Febru- jutting rocks. Seizing the lines and bendary and May, and many of their festivals. Ing against them with all the strength of his June was considered the most propitious arms, and forcing an almost superhuman month of the year for matrimony, especially weight upon the brake, he checked the if the day chosen were that of the full moon or the conjunction of the sun and moon. The month of May was especially to be avoided, as it was under the influence of had it gone over. That's all .- Denver spirits adverse to happier households; and News. for centuries this superstition seemed to prevail in Italy against May marriages, and even to this day prevails in some parts of England and our own country. In China Hall, London, between Rubinstein, who marriages are positively prohibited at certain was about to begin a concert, and an impastimes and seasons on account of their being

"Oh, yes! and a dren; and it is still thought unlucky to thousand thanks. Where is it?" was the marry in Lent. "Marry in Lent and you'll live to repent." An old line also says, "May never was ye month of love." And Levi Sharp, of Pittsburgh, who was killed "May never was ye month of love." And another, "Who marries between ye sickle and ye scythe will never thrive." The old thought that he must furnish all the matter rhyme that we have all heard tells us to thought that he must furnish all the matter

"Monday for health,

Wednesday the best day of all,
Thursday for crosses,
Friday for losses,
Saturday no luck at all."

At one time it was thought that all those who married on Tuesdays and Thursdays olas: would be happy. Among the Romans no marriage was celebrated without an auger being first consulted. In the middle ages it was considered an ill omen if the bridal party, in going to the church, met a monk, priest, hare, dog, cat, lizard, or serpent; while all would go well if a wolf, spider, or toad were encountered. It is lucky if the initials of a wedded couple spell a word. In the south of England it is said to be unlucky for a bride to look in the glass after she is completely dressed before she goes to the church; se a glove or some other article is put on after the last look has been RAILROAD TUNNEL, AND OTHER WON- unhappy omen if a couple are disappointed in getting married on the day first fixed for

At midnight last night a ghostly figure of a man, with a towel wound around his head crept stealthily out of the back door of Mr. Yat's residence and limped across the garden. The figure carried a basket and a spade; it reached the darkest corner of the yard, and after digging a trench emptied the contents of earth back into it, and as the figure shovelled the dirt back into the hole, low sobs and moans of passionate anguish welled up from his bosom. When the last spadeful of earth had been scooped on to the mound the figure jumped on top, and in a hoarse voice murmured,

"Oh, if she were only buried as deep!"

A HINT FOR JOHN HAY.—Here's a chance for John Hay, the author of "Jim Buldsoe," to try himself. Last Friday, when the Floyd Hill and Georgetown coach, with six powerful horses, had stopped at Fall River, the driver got down for some purpose, leaving an invalid on the box to hold the reins. During the absence of the driver the horses started on a runaway expedition, and the man on the box was took weak to hold them. The coach was filled with men, women, and children, and the frantic beasts dashed along through the canyon with such desperate speed that every cheek was blanched with the fear of distruction that seemed so imminent. In all this danger, though, there came a hero. D. M. McCurdy, who is a manufacturers and wholesale dealers in coach, and he clambered out through one of its narrow windows and gained the box and the lines while the now thoroughly terrified maddened steeds in their wild career, just on the edge of a precipice that would have been the end of all the crew of the coach about THIRTY-ONE ACRES of highly-improved land.

The improvements are a large BRICK DWELL-ING, occupying an elevated situation, and the usual out-bulldings.

The grounds contain some handsome shade-trees, and within the yard there is a bold spring. This was once regarded as one of the most attractive country-seats near the city, and with the judicious outlay of a reasonable sum of money it could be made in every respect desirable as a home and for trucking or gardening purposes. It lies within a short distance of the wharves of the Chesapeake and Ohio Italiroad Company.
